Army enlistment process now online

FORT KNOX, Ky. – Young men and women interested in joining the Army can now begin the application process without setting foot in a recruiting station.

The U.S. Army Recruiting Command has implemented the Army Career Explorer, an online tool that allows applicants who are hesitant about visiting a recruiter in person to begin the process to become a Soldier from their homes.

Army Career Explorer is the logical next step in Army Recruiting's use of the Internet. Army Recruiting Command originally developed www.goarmy.com as an information Web site, and over the years has expanded its informational offerings to include video segments and live online chat with cyber recruiters. Army Career Explorer takes the next step, allowing a prospect to not only gather information, but also to begin the actual process of enlisting.

The Army Career Explorer helps applicants become more familiar with the Army and the jobs for which they may qualify. They can watch job videos and also ask questions about the Army and the enlistment process. Applicants create an account to access the tool on the Army's goarmy.com Web site.

In Army Career Explorer, applicants begin filling out their enlistment paperwork. They can take as much time as necessary and will be able to enter and exit the program as often as desired before submitting information.

If an applicant is having problems completing the information at any time during the process, he or she can call their local recruiter to get help.

To find out more about the Army Career Explorer or to create an account, log on to www.goarmy.com and click on "Overview" in the right-hand column under Army Career Explorer.
